THE MARY WASHINGTON. - A correspondent of the Washington Caronicle, in describing a late trip on board the steamer Mary Washing-

Before starting a look around the boat convinced me that she was a staunch and commodious craft, and after she had started I noticed one peculiarity in which she differed from most other boats that ply on Eastern tide waters, where there is sufficient depth at the wharves to enable a vessel of considerable draft of water to make landings, namely, that there was above deck no see sawing walking-beam, such as is conspicuous on most Eastern boats, but instead of this the cylinder and piston of the engine were placed horizontally below deck, after the manner of the Western river steamers, thus requiring less depth of hold, and enabling the boat to be constructed so as to run in less depth of water and make landings where there is shallow water and no wharves, as is done by the Western river boats. One purpose of the Upper Potomac Navigation Company is to bring the producers of the fruits and vegetables grown along the shores of the Potomac and the consumers thereof in Washington nearer together without the inter-vention of "middle men." That fact being known the advantages of the peculiar construction of the Mary Washington will be readily understood, namely, the facilities afforded thereby for touching at the small landings and the farms to pick up for transportation wnatever the producers along shore may wish to send to market. I have heard it said that some of the Western boats require so little depth of water that they can rup on a heavy dew. I don't know that the proprietors of the Mary Washington claim that much for her, but I do know that she can run close up to the "dew point" on the green, grassy shore at several of her land-

But the matter of special interest to me on to-day's trip was the fact that by special arrangement with President Troth and other managers of the company, a party of excursionists were to be taken four miles further down the Potomac and landed at Col. Edward Daniel's Gunston farm. It was my privilege to be permitted to accomp by that party, and enjoy the rare treat which the extra trip afforded those who participated in it. At Gunston the party was taken in charge of and escorted by Col. Daniels and his excellent lady to view the various improvements in fruit growing, &c., which the colonel has inaugurated. After see ing the luscious fruits and indulging therein, I am not surprised that old Mother Eve yielded to temptation when it came in such an alluring

A NINETEENTH CENTURY GHOST STORY .-An interesting story in connection with the death of George Smith, the Assyriologist, is told in the London papers. This gentleman died at Aleppo on the 19th of August at or about the hour of six in the afternoon. On the same day, and between three quarters of an hour and an hour later, a triend and fellow-worker of Mr. Smith's-Dr. Delitzch -was going to the bouse of a third person, the author of the account of the labors of the departed scholar which appeared in the Academy. In the course of his walk Dr. Delitzeh passed within a stone's throw of the house in which Mr. Smith lived when in Loudon, and suddenly heard his own name uttered aloud in a "most piercing cry," which thrilled him to the marrow. The fact impressed him so strongly that he looked at his watch and noted the hour. Dr. D livzeh, who strongly disavows any superstitious leanings, was ashamed to mention the circumstance to his friend on reaching that geotleman's house, although on his return home he owns that his nervous apprehensions of some mournful event in his own family found relief in tears, and that he recorded all the facts in his note book that same night. Dr. Delitzch told the story on the 5 h inst. at a friend's breakfast table, with all the circumstances mentioned above, including the hour at which he heard the shrill cry. He distinctly denied having been thinking of Mr. George Smith at the
